ABSTRACT

A multi-protocol packet translator is disclosed. The translator may have microcoded control to translate a packet from one protocol to another. The microcoded instructions may be fed through a pipeline to control reading of information from information sources (including the original packet) and selectively connecting those sources to an output memory.